»Jef Raskin, of Macintosh and Canon Cat fame, put together the three laws in his 2000 book The Humane Interface, and they go as follows:

- A computer shall not harm your work or, through inaction, allow your work to come to harm.
- A computer shall not waste your time or require you to do more work than is strictly necessary.
- An interface is humane if it is responsive to human needs and considerate of human frailties.«
